Editor's Note

Reconciliation and reintegration would be the two elements of the 'transition strategy' envisioned by the United States in the years to come. While the Afghan government has paced up "Operation Omid" to facilitate and manage transition on ground, the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) has formed elite "Counterterrorist Pursuit Teams" made up of highly-trained Afghan troops. These "Counterterrorist Pursuit Teams" have been specifically designed to hunt down and kill Taliban and other militant commanders.

Prime Minister Thinley of Bhutan was on a diplomatic tour to some of the South Asian countries. In the last two weeks, Thinley visited Pakistan, Bangladesh and Maldives. Addressing a press conference in Pakistan on March 21, 2011, Thinley emphasised the need to promote inter-regional trade and tourism. He also emphasised the need to combat terrorism in South Asia, the biggest regional challenge confronting the South Asian countries in the twenty-first century. In Bangladesh Thinley flagged off the issue of water sharing and water management on transboundary rivers. Jointed collaboration on hydel projects between Bhutan-India-Bangladesh was also discussed between both the countries.

Meanwhile, the visit of the Chinese Army Chief General Chen Bingde was the spotlight in the Nepali media. China expressed the willingness to assist in developing infrastructure for the Nepal Army. Termed as the 'good-will' visit, General Bingde announced Rs 1.42 billion aid to Nepal. Given the political uncertainty in Nepal, the visit can be seen as a significant diplomatic move by China in engaging the various stakeholders in Nepal. The visit also has high-symbolic value considering the ongoing face-off between the Maoists and the Nepali Army.

Petraeus backs US troop drawdown in Afghanistan

The Guardian, March 16, 2011.

The top U.S. commander in Afghanistan insists the military can boost Afghan security forces to fight the Taliban, begin a troop drawdown this summer and fulfill President Barack Obama's goal of a long-term partnership with the Kabul government. Facing a skeptical Congress and a war-weary public, Army Gen. David Petraeus is seeking to build support for the continued and costly U.S. involvement in Afghanistan, telling lawmakers the conflict is turning around despite concerns about the viability of President Hamid Karzai's government and the dedication of neighboring Pakistan to root out terrorism.

New rings set up in Afghanistan to upset regional stability - Tajik official Asia -Plus Nes Agency, March 16, 2011.

New criminal groups are being formed on the territory of Afghanistan with the aim of destabilizing the situation in neighbouring countries. The secretary of the Security Council of Tajikistan, Amirqul Azimov, said this during a two-day session of the working group on Afghanistan under the council of the foreign ministers of the Collective Security Treaty Organization (CSTO) member states opened in Dushanbe today. Militants are currently undergoing special training at camps located in areas not controlled by Afghanistan's authorities, and on Pakistan's regions bordering Afghanistan, he said. "We have sufficient information [about this]," Azimov added.

Reports say Pakistan, Iran fuelling insecurity

National Afghanistan, March 16, 2011.

Some reports have said Iran is involved in disrupting security in southern Kandahar Province. The Kandahar mayor says the neighbouring countries, especially Pakistan and Iran, see their own interests in insecurity in Afghanistan, adding that they have always tried to disrupt peace and security in Afghanistan. Although the Iranian interior minister denies equipping and training of the Taleban by Iran, local Kandahar officials stress that the neighbouring countries, especially Iran and Pakistan, train and equip the Taleban. US, Afghan Officials Discuss New Strategic Partnership

Daily Outlook Afghanistan, March 18, 2011.

Senior US and Afghan officials deliberated upon a new strategic partnership between the two countries, with both sides expressing a strong conviction to build up Afghan institutions, the foreign ministry said. At a joint meeting that held in Kabul, officials from the two countries discussed the new strategic partnership, which will also contribute to improved economic and political relations between Afghanistan neighbors, the ministry said in a statement. The participants pledged to continue discussions on the topic in April, and to consult with relevant domestic and international stakeholders as part of their deliberations. Both sides also agreed that a stable and peaceful Afghanistan would serve as an anchor for long-term regional stability and contribute to international security, the statement said

USGS: strong quake hits NE Afghanistan, no immediate reports of injures or damage

Washington Post, March 21, 2011.

The United States Geological Survey says a strong earthquake with a preliminary magnitude of 5.6 has struck northeastern Afghanistan. Police in the region say there are no immediate reports of injuries or damage. The USGS said Monday that the quake struck in the Hindu Kush region about 69 kilometers (42 miles) southeast of Faizabad, the capital of Badakhshan province. It hit at 2:19 p.m. (0949 GMT) and had its epicenter in a sparsely populated region 227 kilometers (172 miles) northeast of the capital. It was felt in Kabul and as far east as the Pakistani capital of Islamabad.

Govt. Embraces Two Big Challenges: Khalili

Daily Outlook Afghanistan, March 22, 2011.

First vice president Karim Khalili said the Afghan government was going to embrace two big challenges in the New Year: reconciliation with Taliban and gradual withdrawal of foreign troops. The main challenge would be for the government to make the peace process a success, he said, calling on individuals involved in the process to be sincere in their efforts at reintegrating Taliban members. Balkh governor Atta Mohammad Noor said they were supportive of the Burhanuddin Rabbani-led High Peace Council. Asked about permanent US military bases in Afghanistan, Noor said what the country needed was economic development to enable it to stand on its feet.

Afghan official, MP welcome security transition process

Noor TV, March 22, 2011.

Speaking on private Noor TV's "Akher-e Khat" ("End of the Line") programme on 22 March, MP Abdolhafiz Mansur and the deputy head of Afghan government's Media and Information Centre, Sediq Seddiqi, both stressed that Afghan forces should take over responsibility for security because the international forces would not stay long and there was no option but for Afghan forces to ensure security of their country themselves.

U.S. welcomes Afghanistan's first transition arrangement

Xinhua Net, March 23, 2011.

The United States welcomed Afghan President Hamid Karzai's announcement of the first three provinces and four cities to begin the process of transition to Afghan-led security in the coming months. "We look forward to troop reductions starting in July and continuing based on conditions on the ground, with the transition to be completed by the end of 2014," Secretary of State Hillary Clinton said in a statement. "As we have long said, the Afghans themselves must take responsibility for their own future – for providing security, for strengthening governance, and for reaching a political solution to the conflict," the top U.S. diplomat added.

Afghan Defence Ministry to launch major operation to ensure security

Tolo TV, March 24, 2011.

The Ministry of National Defence has tried to implement a massive programme, of which the transition process from foreign forces to Afghan forces is an important part. The operation, called "Omid", is to be put into practice in various aspects, as part of the programme. In the meantime, General David Petraeus is saying NATO wants to complete its role in Afghanistan by 2014. The Omid Operation prioritizes the mopping-up areas, separation of people [from insurgents], protection of people, winning people's support, inviting the people to cooperate, good governance, development and ensuring security of highways.

Afghan daily questions purposes of president's trip to Iran

Hasht-e Sobh, March 27, 2011.

Mr Karzai's trip to Iran is ostensibly aimed at participating in the second international Nowruz celebrations but whether we like it or not, a number of meetings and discussions on different issues will also be held during this trip. No official agreements are expected to be signed during this trip, but officials of the Islamic Republic of Iran are expected, as usual, to express their dissatisfaction with the presence of foreign forces in Afghanistan and expect Afghan officials to remain meaningfully silent and thus support the views of their Iranian counterparts. By acting this way, Iran will put Afghan officials in a passive and defensive position as Afghans will say that Afghanistan's strategic relations with the United States will not pose any dangers to Iran.

Russia open for talks with Taleban, special envoy says

Interfax, March 28, 2011.

Russia is ready for dialogue with the Taleban, although there are no such contacts at the moment." We have no direct contacts with the Taleban. However, it is crucially important that Russia supports the process of national reconciliation in Afghanistan," Russian special presidential envoy to Afghanistan Zamir Kabulov told Interfax. Russia does not support the idea of settling the Afghan issue by force alone, Kabulov said. "Therefore, we believe the Taleban could return to peaceful life, reintegrate into society, but there are conditions that are stated in UN Security Council resolutions: those who are ready to make peace must stop their armed struggle against the authorities, recognize the Afghan constitution and sever ties with Al-Qa'idah and other extremist groups. If there are people among the Taleban that can make such a step - and there are some - we are open for discussion with them," he said.

Taliban claims responsibility for Afghan suicide bombing

Washington Post, March 28, 2011.

The Taliban claimed responsibility for a suicide bombing in eastern Paktika province that killed at least 24 people. The attack appeared intended to show the insurgent group's strength as the springtime fighting season begins. The Taliban took responsibility a day earlier for kidnapping 50 men in Kunar province, also in the east. NATO commanders say they anticipate the Taliban will step up high-profile attacks this spring to show that an aggressive drive by foreign troops over the winter to clear insurgent strongholds didn't weaken the group. Three suicide bombers slammed a truck packed with explosives into a building that housed a construction company Sunday about 8 p.m. in the Barmal district of Paktika province, said Mokhlis Afghan, a spokesman for the governor.

Problems Facing Counter-insurgency Operations

Daily Outlook Afghanistan, March 29, 2011.

The massive truck bomb that went off in front of the Zahir Road Construction Company in Barmal District of Paktika Province minutes after 7 p.m. on Sunday is the first in this year and the latest massive suicide bombing to specifically target civilians. The early count of casualties point to 23 dead and 60 injured while it is highly probable that the number of dead and wounded will be much higher than these numbers. Almost all the casualties of this attack have been civilians; engineers, employees and managers of the construction company plus a few security guards who protected their office premises. According to reports, Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) has formed elite "Counterterrorist Pursuit Teams" made up of highly-trained Afghan troops, numbering up to 3000, whose duties are to specifically hunt down and kill Taliban and other militant commanders. The operations undertaken by these "Counterterrorist Pursuit Teams", which are probably modeled on the lines of American military's Joint Special Operations Command (JSOC) teams, have proved to be effective against high-value militant commanders.

Former Taliban Reconcile with Afghan Government

Afghanistan Daily Outlook, March 31, 2011 .

When Gen. David Petraeus testified before Congress recently, the top American commander in Afghanistan gave a generally upbeat assessment – but he acknowledged that military successes won't win the war. Afghan-led reintegration "of reconcilable insurgents must also be an important element of the strategy – and it now is," he told lawmakers on March 15. Petraeus said some 700 former Taliban have already reconciled with the government.

Chinooks Return to the Afghan Skies

Afghanistan Daily Outlook, March 31, 2011.

The Australian Defence Force's air operations capability has returned to Afghanistan to support International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) operations for 2011. The Rotary Wing Group recently commenced full operational duties. Commanding Officer of the Rotary Wing Group, Lieutenant Colonel Neil Monaghan, said that this partnership had great impact in terms of strengthening the relationship with Coalition partners. "The Australian contribution, although small in comparison to the American aviation assets, is considered an integral part of ISAF and the mission is an important element in the Coalition effort in Afghanistan," Lieutenant Colonel Monaghan said. Since their first deployment in 2006, the Australian Chinooks have been highly valued on the battlefield and are well suited to operations in Afghanistan's traditionally harsh environment.

BNP returns to JS, walks out

The Daily Star , March 16, 2011.

Returning to the House after a long time, Leader of the Opposition Khaleda Zia launched an attack on the government and said it has “completely failed to meet people’s expectation”. The opposition lawmakers also returned but walked out afterwards and did not return.” The country is in a deep crisis. There is no rule of law, democracy, independence of the judiciary and the media. The government has no success...,” said Khaleda, the BNP chief. She demanded discussion on various important issues in the House, adjourning its other scheduled business. Opposition lawmakers already submitted notices to the Parliament Secretariat asking for discussions on different issues including share market crash, soaring food prices, and the sliding law and order.

Moriarty reiterates concern over Yunus’ removal

Daily Star, March 17, 2011.

United States Ambassador to Bangladesh in Dhaka James F Moriarty reiterated concern over Prof Yunus’ removal from the Grameen Bank but said the US has no role to play in the issue. The US had publicly expressed concerns over the incident. Prof Yunus is a widely respected person, he said adding: “We just expressed our concerns.” “We have no role in this matter,” Moriarty said when asked whether the US was interfering into Bangladesh’s internal matters. He also said Prof Yunus is a global figure and he has relations with many people at the international level and the Grameen Bank has a branch in the United States as well, Moriarty said, adding that this is why the US has expressed its concern on the issue. The US ambassador was addressing the inauguration of two-day Education USA fair organised by American Centre of the US Embassy in Dhaka at the Brac Centre Inn in the city in the morning.

Bangladesh ruling party starts campaign against Nobel laureate

Daily Star, March 26, 2011.

A section of the ruling Awami League leaders have started a campaign against Grameen Bank founder Prof Muhammad Yunus [Nobel laureate], who was removed by the government from the post of managing director of the bank on the grounds of being too aged. The anti-Yunus campaign is being conducted when a compromise between the government and the Nobel laureate is in progress, amid the US and few other western countries' call for an honourable solution to the vexed issue. The party has adopted a hush-hush policy to carry out the campaign against Prof Yunus through seminars, symposiums, round-table discussions, and political rallies across the country, party sources said.

Wild Islamism on rise in Bangladesh

Weekly Blitz, March 30, 2011.

Finally state minister for law, Advocate Qamrul Islam in Bangladesh made open statement expressing his government's realization that some Islamists and radical clergies are trying to turn Bangladesh into another 'Afghanistan'. He said, "Few 'fanatics' and 'religion-mongered' want to make the country 'an Afghanistan' by snatching away women rights". Since past couple of weeks, Islamists are on continuous protests in Bangladesh, which is led by pro-Taliban clergies like Mufti Fazlul Haque Amini and Moulana Rezaul Karim. Both the clergies are infamous for giving instigations to Jihad and anti-West as well as anti-Semitic activities.

All projects under the present plan require rescheduling if it ought to be completed by December 2012, six months before the end of its period. This was what Prime Minister Jigmi Y Thinley had to share, as he began apprising some 1,200 senior civil servants, who crammed the convention centre at Thimphu yesterday, about the dzongkhags' mid term reviews that ended recently. "Donors are already saying they won't donate anymore," he said. "The usual practice of spilling over will not do, because many schemes are needed, and many services are needed to be delivered now." Should projects be delayed for lack of human and financial resources, natural calamities or other security reasons, he said, they should be completed within the next six months.

Blood in Brahmaputra

Deccan Chronicle, March 22, 2011.

With the recent killing of 24 "Indians" by militants of the separatist National Democratic Front of Bodoland (NDFB) in the Bongaigaon and Darrang districts of Upper Assam, the organisation declared the entire north bank region of the Brahmaputra as the territory of a separate Bodoland. It asked all non-Bodos to vacate the area. The killings were a show of force in a proclaimed policy of "20 for one", i.e. kill 20 "Indians" regardless of age or gender in reprisal for any Bodo killed during internal security operations. The victims were mainly Hindi speakers from Bihar, besides some local Bengalis and Assamese. The neighbouring countries of Bhutan and Bangladesh are attempting to bar their gates and insulate their own territories from any backflow from north-eastern India. The Royal Bhutan Army (RBA) had earlier launched active offensive operations to purge the Indo-Bhutan border areas of the Ulfa and Bodo insurgent groups who had intruded into sovereign territory of the Dragon Kingdom, to establish camps and training bases.

Bhutan plans to sell hydro-power to Bangladesh

Times of Assam, March 27, 2011.

Bangladesh and Bhutan are planning to bring about a joint venture of proper sharing of water resources between the two countries. This was disclosed by the Foreign Minister of Bangladesh, Dipu Moni, after a high level meeting between Bangladesh Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina and king of Bhutan, Jigme Khesar Namgyel Wangchuck took place on Friday, 24th of March in Dhaka. The meeting was part of Bhutanese King's five day official visit to Bangladesh to attend the 40th Independence Day celebration in the country. The meeting also centered around collaboration in the pharmaceutical sector as well as to hire Bangladeshi doctors to Bhutan.

Bhutan's third vernacular paper launched as weekly

Kuensel, March 28, 2011.

The third private Dzongkha newspaper was launched yesterday, taking the number of Bhutanese newspapers to nine and the third among national language newspaper. The 16-page weekly Druk Gyelyong newspaper promises to do what its predecessors have been striving to - promote the national language. The stories the newspaper carries are minus reporters' bylines and photo captions. Its target audience is the dratshang [monastery] officials, non-formal education literates and school students.

Refugees left homeless after fires

Catholic Sentinel, March 29, 2011.

Up to 6,000 refugees from Bhutan were left homeless after fire swept through two U.N. camps in eastern Nepal. At least 3,000 people were left without shelter and 20 were injured after a fire in Goldhap camp destroyed about 700 of 800 huts. Hours later, two children were injured and several thousand were made homeless in the fire at Sanichare camp. Officials said more than 500 huts were reduced to ashes in 90 minutes in Goldhap camp. The fire also burned two Jesuit-run youth centers and a health center. The second fire destroyed about 180 huts in 45 minutes. Aid organizations such as Caritas Nepal and the Red Cross were working to provide relief assistance to the victims. It was not clear how the blaze started. A local government official said the federal government would give each victim 1,500 rupees ($21). In 1990, Bhutan began a program of “Bhutanization,” enforcing northern Bhutan culture as the official national culture. Language, dress and land ownership codes discriminated against non-Bhutanese minority groups.

Maldives urges UN Security Council: Support imposing no fly zone over Libya

The Asian Tribune, March 15, 2011.

The Maldives urged the United Nations Security Council to support imposing a no-fly zone over Libya to prevent Gaddafi using air force to attack rebels and civilians. The Maldives urged all permanent members of the UN Security Council to immediately support the imposition of a no-fly zone in Libya, as advocated by the Arab League, the President’s Office said. Maldivian President Mohamed Nasheed called upon the UN Security Council to “fulfill its duty to protect the people of Libya and urgently agree on a robust course of action to prevent further deterioration of the situation in Libya.”

Madhesi leaders leave for India for consultation

The Himalayan Times, March 16, 2011.

The top brass of three Madhes parties—Terai Madhes Loktantrik Party (TMLP), Madhesi Janaadhikar Forum-Loktantrik (MJF-L), and Nepal Sadbhawana Party (NSP)—embarked on a visit to India on Wednesday afternoon. TMLP Chairman Mahantha Thakur, MJF-L Chairman and former Deputy Prime Minister Bijaya Kumar Gachhadar and NSP Chairman Rajendra Mahato flew to New Delhi this afternoon to hold consultations with the Indian leaders on Nepal’s emerging political developments, it is said. The political consultation would dwell on finding ways to strengthen democratic unity in Nepal against what has been perceived as a massive leftist polarisation with two major leftist parties, CPN UML and UCPN-

Maoist teaming up for government, it is reported. All the three parties have already decided not to join the Khanal-led government.

Nepal defence minister rules out “separate force” of Maoist ex-combatants

Nepal News, March 17, 2011.

Defence Minister Bishnu Poudel has ruled out a “separate force” of Maoist combatants when they are integrated. According to him, “integration and adjustment” would be done as per the interim constitution. Stating that the integration process would not be as per the deal signed by UML [Communist Party of Nepal-Unified (Marxist-Leninist)] chairman and Prime Minister Jhala Nath Khanal and Unified Communist Party of Nepal (Maoist) chairman Pushpa Kamal Dahal, Minister Poudel clarified that the government would develop an “integration model” acceptable to all parties very soon. He was speaking at an interaction programme in Kathmandu on Wednesday [16 March].

Govt will collapse if seven-point deal scrapped: Gurung

My Republica, March 20, 2011.

UCPN (Maoist) Standing Committee member Dev Gurung warned on Sunday that the current government would collapse if the seven-point deal reached between the CPN-UML and the Maoist was scrapped in order to bring Nepali Congress (NC) on board the government. Gurung, who is considered hardliner in the party, ruled out any possibility of a compromise on the controversial deal reached hours before the election of Jhala Nath Khanal as prime minister. His remark comes in the wake of some UML leaders’ comments that they would be willing to scrap the deal if the NC agrees to join the government.

Nepal observes World Water Day amid horrifying water scarcity

Xinhua, March 22, 2011.

Amid horrifying reality of water scarcity across the country, Nepal is observing "World Water Day" on Tuesday with various awareness creating programs and discussion. A decade onwards, water scarcity has become a major problem in the Himalayan Kingdom which is renowned for abundance source of water resources and hundreds of rivers in its land. Hence, the country began marking "World Water Day" as "Nepal National Water Week" since 2009. Meanwhile, experts have outlined severe condition of water supply in Nepali capital that would worsen in future. "More than three million people live in capital, plus 72 percent of industries are located in urban areas. This has increased water demand in capital exceeding water supply," said Dhiraj Pradhananga, president of The Small Earth Nepal. According to him, the total water demand exceeded water supply in capital since 1991. The water demand of the valley was estimated 170 million liters a day (MLD) and out of which only 120 was supplied in 2001. In recent years, population and industrial business in the capital has rapidly increased water demand.

Peace Process

The Republica, March 22, 2011.

Much concern has been expressed about the peace process but little work has been done to actually conclude it successfully. It's now time for action, not words. President Dr Ram Baran Yadav on Sunday expressed his worries to Prime Minister Jhala Nath Khanal and requested him to take initiative to move the stalled peace process forward. The Maoists must urgently propose at least three things: First, the number of their combatants they wish to see integrated into the security forces; secondly, the modality of integration; and thirdly, the norms for integration. Once they come up with their proposal people will have a chance to see how other parties respond. If the other parties make impractical demands, they will be seen as trying to obstruct the peace process. But so long as the Maoists do not place a proposal on the table the finger should remain pointed at them

Court indicts Raymond Davis for double murder

Dawn, March 16, 2011.

A court on Wednesday formally charged Raymond Davis, a CIA contractor, on two counts of murder at a hearing held at a prison in Lahore, a police official said. Davis, 36, shot dead two Pakistanis in the eastern city on January 27 following what he described as an attempted armed robbery. He said he acted in self-defence and the United States says he has diplomatic immunity and should be repatriated. "He has been indicted," a police investigator assigned to the case told Reuters from inside Kot Lakhpat prison, where the trial is being held under tight security. If convicted, Davis could face the death penalty. A US embassy spokesman said he had no knowledge of any negotiations to settle the case. The principle of diplomatic immunity was key to the case, the spokesman added.

PPP won't destabilise Punjab government, says Zardari

Daily Times, March 17, 2011.

The Pakistan People's Party (PPP) would not destabilise the Punjab government or undermine the broad based national reconciliation policy that the PPP adopted three years ago, President Asif Ali Zardari said. Presidential spokesperson, Farhatullah Babar, quoted statements made by the president during a telephonic address from Bilawal House to Punjab PPP MPs. The PPP would play the role of a responsible opposition in Punjab, Zardari told the PPP MPs, who had gathered in the Governor's House, Lahore, for the purpose. The president also advised the MPs to perform their duties "as a responsible and critical opposition, but not allow themselves to be provoked into saying or doing anything that militated against the spirit of democracy", Farhatullah said.

Cameron Munter summoned to FO over drone attack

Dawn, March 18, 2011.

Pakistan on Friday summoned the US ambassador and lodged a strong protest over a drone strike in a tribal region which killed at least 40 people, the foreign ministry said. US Ambassador Cameron Munter was told "that such strikes were not only unacceptable but also constituted a flagrant violation of humanitarian norms and law," the ministry said in a statement. Thursday's attack was the most lethal drone strike to hit the lawless region of North Waziristan since August 2008 when the covert campaign escalated in the areas bordering Afghanistan, and the seventh such attack in nine days.

Punjab Assembly passes resolution against drone strikes

Dawn, March 18, 2011.

The Punjab Assembly on Friday unanimously passed a resolution condemning US drone attacks in Pakistan's northwestern tribal areas, DawnNews reported. The resolution, tabled by Pakistan Muslim League - Nawaz's MPA Begum Khwaja Naseem, stated that US drone attacks in the tribal areas were a breach of national sovereignty. The resolution condemned the attack in North Waziristan in which at least 40 civilians were killed and demanded the government to adopt a clear stance on drone strikes. The House, subsequently, adopted the resolution unanimously. The covert campaign last year doubled missile attacks in the tribal area, where more than 100 drone strikes killed over 670 people in 2010, compared with 45 strikes that killed 420 in 2009, according to an AFP tally.

Pakistan, Turkey presidents discuss urging UN to take notice of Koran burning

Associated Press of Pakistan, March 25, 2011.

President Asif Ali Zardari on Friday [25 March] telephoned Turkey's President Abdullah Gul and talked about the recent incident of the deliberate desecration of the Holy Quran by a lunatic in Florida. President Zardari stressed the need for collectively urging the United Nations to take note of it and evolve plans for promoting cultural and religious harmony in the world, said a President House statement. The two Presidents agreed that the deliberate desecration of the Holy Quran was the most despicable act and steps needed to be taken to prevent the recurrence of such irrational acts. The two leaders also discussed bilateral ties and the regional situation.

Pakistan foreign secretary says talks to lead to strategic dialogue with US

Dawn, March 26, 2011.

Foreign Secretary Salman Bashir is expected to arrive in Washington in a few days for talks aimed at ironing out the differences that have adversely affected US-

Pakistan ties, diplomatic sources told Dawn. The talks will precede the next round of the US-Pakistan strategic dialogue in Islamabad that will be attended by a high-level US delegation headed possibly by Secretary of State Hillary Clinton. "Both sides felt the need to have preparatory talks before next month's dialogue," said a diplomatic source.

China request Nepal to block Tibetans' movement

My Republica, March 27, 2011.

Chinese officials have requested Nepal to ensure blockage in the movement of Tibetans through the border. Chinese officials put forward the request during a security meeting at Khasa, Tibet between the security officials of adjoining regions on Saturday. Stressing that the Tibetans are running anti-Chinese activities after entering Nepal, the Chinese officials requested Nepal to beef up security at border. They also indirectly requested Nepali officials to extradite arrested Tibetans to China.

Pakistan: Sindh-based party lays down conditions for rejoining federal coalition

Dawn, March 27, 2011.

The Muttahida Qaumi Movement [MQM] is not ready to join the federal cabinet without getting its conditions met in Sindh, according to sources in the party. The MQM, they said on Saturday [26 March], was anxiously waiting for a reshuffle in the provincial cabinet that had been discussed with the PPP [Pakistan People's Party] leadership and settlement of issues relating to the local government and law and order. The Pakistan People's Party, the sources said, had told the MQM that Prime Minister Yousuf Raza Gilani had delayed the planned expansion of his cabinet in the hope that its Sindh-based coalition partner would rejoin it. The MQM, which previously had only two [federal] portfolios, now has been offered three ministries - that of housing and works, petroleum and natural resources, and ports and shipping. But it has not shown any desire to rejoin the federal cabinet and decided to wait for an appropriate time. According to the sources, the MQM particularly eyes the key [provincial] ministries of home and local bodies in Sindh. These portfolios are held by men closely associated with President Zardari.

Envoy says China-Pakistan cooperation to aid regional development

Associated Press of Pakistan, March 28, 2011.

Chinese ambassador in Pakistan, Liu Jian, while appreciating recent multi-sectoral agreements between Pakistan and China, said these would augur well for the development in this region. He was addressing an MoU [Memorandum of Understanding] signing ceremony of hybrid seeds at a local hotel on Monday [28

March]. The MoU was signed between Auriga group and Hubei seed company of China, while speaker, Punjab Assembly, Rana Muhammad Iqbal was also present on the occasion. The Chinese ambassador observed it was sign of a deep friendship that many agreements were reached by the two countries during the past few years. He said such cooperation in various sectors and walks of life would further strengthen the all-season Pakistan-China friendship. He called upon Pakistani agricultural scientist to undertake research and benefit from Chinese advancements in this field so that the country's food-related exports could be increased further. "In the past, we had to import wheat but now we are self sufficient in this regard," he elaborated.

Kashmir not on Gilani's visit agenda

Dawn, March 29, 2011.

The government tried on Monday to contain the diplomatic scoop of upcoming meeting between Prime Minister Yousuf Raza Gilani and his Indian counterpart Manmohan Singh on the eve of the World Cup semi-final on Wednesday. Briefing newsmen after a cabinet meeting, Information Minister Firdous Ashiq Awan said that primarily the prime minister was going to watch the Pakistan-India cricket match, and 'not to discuss the Kashmir issue', but she hastened to add that the two prime ministers could discuss anything on the occasion.

Pakistani inmate gives police the slip

The Himalayan Times, March 29, 2011.

Already red-faced in the wake of its failure to curb crimes, police department faced yet another humiliating blow after a prisoner escaped from a hospital, where he was undergoing treatment, on Sunday night.

Pakistan's Mohammad Jamil, an inmate in Capital's Central Jail on the charge of smuggling fake Indian currency notes, on Sunday night hoodwinked police personnel guarding him and ran away from Shahid Gangalal National Heart Centre. A five-member team of police led by an ASI was entrusted with the task of guarding the convict. Sunday's incident comes hot on the heels of a shooting in Teku on Friday, in which one person was killed, and another incident of shooting inside the Central Jail on March 10.

No real progress in dispute resolution

My Republica, March 29, 2011.

The subcommittee formed to settle the contentious issues in constitution writing has failed to make substantive progress in recent days even as its extended deadline is expiring Tuesday. The Constitutional Committee (CC) of the Constituent Assembly (CA) formed the subcommittee, which is headed by UCPN (Maoist) Chairman Pushpa Kamal Dahal, on February 25 with a view to expedite dispute settlement. Former Prime Minister Madhav Kumar Nepal from CPN-UML and Nepali Congress parliamentary party leader Ram Chandra Paudel, among other lawmakers, are its members. While the body was originally given a 17-day deadline to accomplish the tasks its deadline was extended for 15 more days on March 15. At the time of its formation of the subcommittee, there were altogether 75 contentious issues in the preliminary drafts. So far the subcommittee has resolved around 40 disputes.

Gilani briefs Zardari on 'cricket diplomacy'

Dawn, March 31, 2011.

The President welcomed the meeting of the two leaders as a positive development for the region and hoped that it would provide further impetus to the efforts for meaningful dialogue between the two countries on all outstanding issues. The President also appreciated Indian prime minister's invitation to the Pakistani leadership to visit India. Regular interactions at all levels, he noted, would not only provide a solid platform to resolve our mutual issues but would also help to obviate and reduce misperceptions and mistrusts.

Samjhauta probe on track: Home Ministry

Indian Express, March 31, 2011.

A day after the Home Secretary-level talks between India and Pakistan in New Delhi, the Ministry of Home Affairs (MHA) on Wednesday said the National Investigation Agency's probe into the Samjhauta Express blasts had gathered momentum. Sixty-eight people were killed, 43 of them Pakistani nationals, in the blast that took place in February 2007. The NIA took over the probe from Haryana Police in 2010. During the talks, Pakistan raised the issue and wanted to know the progress in the investigation.

UPFA made inroads into the Vanni - a traditionally Tamil region

Asian Tribune, March 21, 2011.

After the recently held elections for the local government bodies, it has become very clear that Sri Lanka's ruling party has made inroads into the traditional Tamil areas into the North; especially in the Vanni region, which was up to 19 May 2009 – for quite a long period, for nearly three decades, under the control of the defeated Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam. The failed policies of the LTTE, which believed in the armed conflict and separation, brought about misery, death and destruction. But after defeating the LTTE, the government is bent on bringing about reconciliation and national integration in the country.

Sri Lanka minister says emergency law needed as Tamil Tiger remnants active

Daily Mirror, March 26, 2011.

While claiming that it intends to relax or totally remove the 'Emergency Regulations' (ER) at the appropriate time, the government said that it was needed at this time for the smooth enforcement of the law. The government intends to relax or totally remove the 'Emergency Regulations' (ER) at the appropriate time, when it considers the ER is not necessary to protect the law and order, cabinet spokesman Anura Priyadarshana Yapa said. "It is true that the country is enjoying the dividends of peace following the crushing of terrorism. But do not forget there are remnants of the LTTE [Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam] are still active and the issue of terrorism has not been fully addressed,' Minister Yapa stressed.

Lankan fishermen affected by further encroachment

Daily Mirror, March 31, 2011.

Alleging that the South Indian fishermen have begun encroaching Sri Lanka's North Western seas, the National Fisheries Solidarity Movement yesterday said both the Sri Lankan and Indian government should not hide the issue behind the Tamil Nadu state elections. National Fisheries Solidarity movement convener Herman Kumara said the Indian Fishermen had begun to encroach the seas off Kalpitiya and Battalangunduwa areas as well. The Lankan fishermen earlier revealed that the coming of Indian fishermen into Lankan waters had resulted in 50 per cent revenue and production losses.
