Even though Gilgit Baltistan has been under Pakistan's control since 1947, neither is it a part of Pakistan's constitution nor does it have a provincial status. This ambiguity in political status and long deprivation of political rights has caused considerable unrest in the region for a long time. In 2009, the government of Pakistan introduced a presidential order, the Empowerment and Self-rule package, which supposedly was done to give the region and the people a sense of political status and identity. The package elicited much enthusiasm but later upon realisation, it was rejected as a mere eyewash. This was done in 2009, the year Gilgit Baltistan witnessed its first general elections. The elections were again due in 2014 after the previous government led by Pakistan Peoples Party (PPP) completed its term. Keeping in view the election year, the government of Pakistan has come up with the Local Government Act in August 2014. As part of this act, local representative in the Gilgit Baltistan region will be elected through adult franchise and there will be reservation for women and minority communities. Elections will be based on single ward electoral system keeping in mind the diverse nature of the society in the region. How effective the latest local government act really is, needs to be seen in due course.

The political upheaval in Pakistan led Pakistan Tehreek e Insaf (PTI) and Tahirul Qadri caused problems in the so called AJK also. The supply routes were sealed in view of security considerations resulting from the protest rallies. Therefore, the people in the 'AJK' faced immense problems as supply of essential goods coming from Pakistan was cut abruptly. Meanwhile, the Prime Minister of 'AJK', Chaudhry Abdul Majeed, slammed both Imran Khan and Tahirul Qadri for challenging a democratically elected PML-N (Pakistan Muslim League-Nawaz) government led by Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif.

Shabbir Mir, “Levelling accusations: PML-Q legislator calls Gilgit-Baltistan chief minister 'a corrupt man'”

The Express Tribune, August 12, 2014

GILGIT: A senior lawmaker from Pakistan Muslim League-Quaid, Mirza Hussain, on August 11 levelled harsh accusations against Gilgit-Baltistan Chief Minister Mehdi Shah. Speaking on the floor of the G-B legislative assembly, Hussain termed Shah a corrupt man “who keeps his personal interest above the [wellbeing of the] masses”. “Shah has been involved in so many corrupt practices over the years. That is why he is unable to speak against bureaucracy,” claimed Hussain during the first day of the current session chaired by Speaker Wazir Baig.

He, however, failed to touch upon why, despite the alleged corruption, his party, the PML-Q, chose to enter the government as a coalition partner four years ago. Hussain also criticised the attitude of bureaucrats towards the assembly and elected representatives.

The criticism was triggered by PML-Nawaz's Fida Nashad after he drew the speaker's attention towards the shortage of “seasonal labour” in the remote hilly areas of the region. “The issue is serious, but unfortunately the government is taking it lightly,” stated Nashad, alluding to the labour needed to keep the roads clear.

“ISI creating sectarian strife in Gilgit”

ANI, August 6, 2014

GILGIT BALTISTAN: Pakistan's notorious spy agency ISI is creating a deep wedge amongst the Shias and Sunnis in Gilgit Baltistan, wherein no rule of law prevails there, and people are picked up and killed at will. ISI has a nefarious plan to create unrest in the region, to disunite the locals in the region so that no nationalist forces can come together against Pakistan.

Khaleeq Kiani, “World marketing of Bhasha dam planned”

Dawn, August 25, 2014

ISLAMABAD: The government plans to launch in October a 'marketing initiative' for $13 billion Diamer-Bhasha dam in the international market for attracting commercial financing of the project through a 'special purpose vehicle'. Sources noted that multilateral institutions, primarily the Asian Development Bank, had been advising the government to adopt a professional approach towards the objective of building the big dam which no single institution, country or group could finance given its mammoth funding requirements and the risks involved.

About 80 per cent of the total financing required—more than $10 billion (Rs1.1 trillion) — has to be raised through external sources and the remaining through domestic arrangements. While a part of the external financing can be arranged by a few institutional lenders, the major financing has to be arranged through the international capital market as a specific infrastructure bond in the name of Diamer-Bhasha Dam Company (DBDC) — a special purpose vehicle.

“Protest ends in Gilgit”

Dawn, August 25, 2014

GILGIT: Majlis-i-Wahdatul Muslimeen (MWM), Pakistan Muslim League-Q and Sunni Ittehad Council on August 24 ended their six-day-long protest sit-in staged on the Karakoram Highway to show solidarity with the participants of the 'Inqilab March' and 'Azadi March' in Islamabad. The road remained blocked during the time of the protest, suspending traffic between Gilgit-Baltistan and rest of the country.

Addressing a press conference on August 23, PML-Q GB president and parliamentary leader in the Gilgit-Baltistan Legislative Assembly Mirza Hussain stated that the protest was ended keeping in view the problems faced by commuters.

Shabbir Mir, “Rock the boat: PML-N leadership on shaky ground in G-B”

The Express Tribune, August 25, 2014

GILGIT: Internal dissent is reportedly brewing within the Pakistan Peoples Party in Gilgit-Baltistan with Chief Minister Mehdi Shah losing popularity amongst the party's ranks. “There have been several corner meetings and it has been agreed to launch a joint struggle to oust Mehdi Shah,” a senior PPP leader noted on August 23. “Jafar Shah has agreed to lead the party if assigned the task by the central leadership. And efforts are under way to install him as quickly as possible.”

According to insiders, ministers Mohammad Jaffar, Muhammad Ismail, Muhammad Naseer and other prominent leaders have asked Jafar Shah to step in to salvage the party. Jafar Shah was the president of PPP's Gilgit chapter till 2008 but then chose to become a judge at the Supreme Appellate Court. He retired in 2011 after serving as a judge for three years. Some senior leaders, meanwhile, have contacted the National Assembly Opposition Leader Khursheed Shah to convey grievances of the regional leadership to PPP co-chairperson Asif Ali Zardari.

Gul Wani, “Surveying a Complex Social Structure, Greater Kashmir”

Greater Kashmir, August 30, 2014

For various obvious reasons the Youth in Jammu and Kashmir have remained the object of attention for society in general and policy planners in particular. Many youth studies were conducted to understand the socio-political and psychological problems of Kashmiri youth. These studies provided policy relevant inputs to state managers and all other stakeholders. The aspirations of youth in Pakistani part of Kashmir have generally remained a neglected area of research. This gap has been filled up by a study carried in AJK by an organization known as Centre for Peace, Development and Reforms (CPDR) supported by London based Conciliation Resources. The CR is an independent organization working in conflict places in different parts of the world. The study has brought to light some very interesting findings which have potential to mitigate the problems of youth in AJK.

The research was conducted by CPDR in all three divisions of AJK, namely Muzaffarabad, Mirpur and Rawlakote. To measure youth opinions comprehensive questionnaire was disseminated among 650 stakeholders in three divisions. Apart from this focus group (FG) discussions were also conducted. The study considers youth as those falling in the age group of 18 to 35. According to 1998 census, the state of AJK had a population of 2.973 million. Over half of AJK population is under 35.

“Suffering official neglect: Kashmir's forgotten forts and temples”

The Express Tribune, August 15, 2014

A research group of the Taxila Institute of Asian Civilisation (TIAC) has mapped 100 heritage sites in four AJK districts that need to be mapped. The research shows that most of the monuments are on the verge of destruction. AJK Tourism and Archaeology Department has the mandate to identify and preserve historical sites. The department, however, has been focusing on tourism only. AJK

AJK Tourism and Archaeology Department Director Arshad Pirzada stated the department lacks funds to carry out documentation and preservation of the sites. “The tourism department has only the word 'archaeology' attached to it. We do not have funds or staff for archaeological projects,” he stated. He stated the department is collaborating with the Federal Ministry of Information, Broadcasting and National Heritage and some universities in Pakistan to start excavation work on these sites. The department is also trying to get Rs1 million funds from Unesco for archaeological projects.

“Unemployment level rising in AJK”

The Nation, August 16, 2014

Unemployment levels in AJK are rising, especially for the highly educated youth and to fill in the vacant posts. The lack of a proper Public Service Commission in AJK comprising required capable members for years is one of the main factors of the sadder state of affairs.

There is unrest among thousands of jobless youth as the PSC could not hold requisite examinations of the candidates who have applied for various vacant positions in response to the invitation of the applications by the PSC since 2011.

“G-B province: AJK premier slams Qadri's Stance”

The Express Tribune, August 18, 2014

Azad Jammu and Kashmir (AJK) Prime Minister Chaudhry Abdul Majeed took strong exception to Pakistan Awami Tehreek (PAT) chief Dr Tahirul Qadri's demands wherein he stated that Gilgit-Baltistan (G-B) be declared a separate province. “I don't know what kind of revolution Qadri wants in Pakistan as he has no knowledge about the history of Jammu and Kashmir dispute. Such statements are unacceptable to the people of Jammu and Kashmir and G-B, and would serve nobody except our enemies,” Majeed added. The AJK premier stated both Imran Khan and Tahirul Qadri were working on a specific agenda to derail democracy in the country. Pakistan Muslim League-Nawaz AJK Secretary General Shah Ghulam Qadir, while giving his party's reaction on Qadri's statement, stated when a territory is not constitutionally part of Pakistan, how could Qadri propose a provincial status for it. “Such a statement is a bid to weaken Pakistan's principled stand on Jammu and Kashmir and G-B,” stated Qadir. He accused Qadri and Imran of weakening Pakistan Army by involving them in internal politics through their protests. Jamaat-i-Islami AJK Naib Ameer Shaikh Aqeelur Rehman condemned Qadri's statement and termed it harmful for the liberation movement in Kashmir.

“Supply Lines cut: AJK feels adverse impact of capital rallies”

The Express Tribune, August 20, 2014

The capital of Azad Jammu and Kashmir (AJK) and other areas in Bagh, Neelum and Hattian Bala are facing an acute shortage of essential commodities like vegetables, frozen food items, dairy products and fresh fruits due to the marches in Islamabad. The main road connecting the country's capital with AJK has been closed near Bharakahu and has hampered all kind of vehicular traffic to the region. The three main fuel stations of Muzaffarabad were without petrol as tankers have not been allowed to cross Murree Road through Bharakahu as Islamabad Police have blocked the road with containers. The traders' community has appealed to both Tahirul Qadri and Imran Khan to end their marches and settle all issues through dialogue as their protests are having an adverse impact on business.

Shabbir Mir, “Rifts within Nurbakhshiyas: Dozens arrested after clashes in Ghanche Valley”

The Express Tribune, August 4, 2014

Police rounded up over three dozen people and booked many others in Ghanche district of Baltistan on August 3 after clashes between two groups left dozens injured. The fighting erupted a day after Eidul Fitr between followers of the Sofia and Imamia groups of the Nurbakhshiya sect, bringing life to a standstill in the valley. The Nurbakhshiyas are a Sufic order.

According to locals, more than 50 people were injured as people pelted each other with stones. A policeman was also critically injured and was admitted to a hospital in Skardu. A rally organised by the Sofia sect was reportedly on its way to meet cleric Faqir Ibrahim a day after Eid, when it encountered followers of the Imamia group. “At first it was just an exchange of angry slogans. Then a brawl erupted, which turned into a fight with both sides firing at each other and pelting each other with stones,” stated one resident of Skardu. The incident caused a cascade of panic across Gilgit-Baltistan (G-B), prompting the authorities to crack down on the trouble makers. “At least 47 people have been arrested for disrupting law and order in the valley,” Ghanche Deputy Commissioner Mir Waqar noted on August 3. “An FIR has also been registered against two clerics [from the opposing groups] in connection with the clashes.”

The DC put the number of injured people at 10 and stated most of them had been hit by stones. This is in addition to the three policemen who were also wounded, stated Waqar, who was recently transferred to the valley. He described the incident as unfortunate but vowed to bring the culprits to justice. To nip the potential for violence in the bud, the administration took a bold decision and booked the clerics heading the two sects. Physical remand of four others was also obtained from a court. The absence of Chief Minister Mehdi Shah, who is in China on an official trip, elicited a bad reaction. "Baltistan is on fire and the CM is enjoying his stay in China," stated Fida Nashad, a leader of the Pakistan Muslim League-Nawaz. His foreign and national trips are just a burden on the exchequer as they have never yielded any positive results for the region, added the lawmaker in the G-B Assembly and a resident of Skardu.

"Tourism Promotion in GB"

Pakistan Observer, August 4, 2014

SKARDU: Baltistan Tourism sector is being given priority and different development schemes are being implemented to promote the important sector, stated a spokesman of Planning and Development Department noted on August 3. He stated a mountaineering school was being constructed near Jarbaso Lake near Shiger at the cost of Rs 100 million, where local youth would be trained by master trainers from abroad and local climbers. As regard touring sites of Gilgit-Baltistan, a report published in a foreign journal reveals that Gilgit-Baltistan is a mountainous territory in the Himalayas in the far northeast corner of country. It is home to 12 of the world's 30 tallest mountain peaks, including K2 and Nanga Parbat. Pakistan considers it to be of extreme strategic importance because it borders ally China and is home to the only land route between the two countries. This route is the breathtakingly beautiful Karakorum Highway, the highest paved international road in the world. The region is also quite distinct from the rest of Pakistan, and indeed the world, in terms of its people. Additionally, the Burusho people of the Hunza Valley speak a language unrelated to any other in the world. Most of the people of Gilgit-Baltistan are Shia Muslims, unlike the rest of Pakistan.

"In anticipation: With little stake, G-B watches crisis unfold in Islamabad"

The Express Tribune, August 13, 2014

GILGIT: Gilgit-Baltistan is not represented in the parliament. The nearly 1.5 million residents of G-B are not allowed to vote in the general elections. It is also the least likely to be affected by any political upheavals. Six hundred kilometers from the federal capital, a school teacher in Gilgit is feeling the anguish of the looming political crisis in Islamabad. "I am disturbed over the impasse although I had no role in electing the prime minister," Masroor Ahmed noted. "But still, my heart beats with those who voted the government into power."

Gilgit-Baltistan is not represented in the parliament. The nearly 1.5 million residents of G-B are not allowed to vote in the general elections. It is also the least likely to be affected by any political upheavals.

Yet, the uncertainty created by Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf and Pakistan Awami Tehreek's call to march to Islamabad on August 14 for 'change' and 'revolution' has captured every one's imagination, and fears. It is not just politicians who are keeping a close watch on developments. Many others like Ahmed are anxious about what the country's future holds, eagerly waiting to see if democracy is still as elusive as ever.

PTI chief Imran Khan and PAT chief Tahirul Qadri have both vowed to rid the nation of the 'corrupt government'. And despite hectic efforts by the government to frustrate their efforts, none of the two seem to be in any mood to give the ruling party room to manoeuvre. Politicians associated with mainstream parties in G-B are especially keen to know what will become of the Pakistan Muslim League-Nawaz (PML-N).

At the PML-N Secretariat in Gilgit, party workers are flocking to regional chief Hafizur Rahman, discussing the likely outcome; starving for insight on the imminent turmoil. "It is unfortunate, PTI has been hijacked by undemocratic forces," stated Rahman, asking Imran Khan to part ways with Tahirul Qadri, whose demands have been vague at best and provocative at worst. "But we are quite confident democracy will triumph,” stated Rahman, not willing to dwell too much on the many 'what ifs'.

“Senate for empowering people of Gilgit Baltistan”

Daily Times, August 18, 2014

The Senate on August 18 unanimously adopted a resolution moved by Senator Farhatullah Babar of the Pakistan People's Party calling upon the government to amend the Gilgit Baltistan (Empowerment and Self-Governance) Order 2009 to empower the people of the area. Speaking on the resolution, Senator Babar stated that the people of Gilgit Baltistan have critical geo-strategic importance for Pakistan. He pointed out that this supreme body the Legislative Council was manned by the bureaucracy of the federal government. He added that that it was a colonial mindset that seeks to control Gilgit Baltistan through executive order from Islamabad and refuses to empower the local assembly to control their own affairs.

“Kargil's divided families yearn for reunion with relatives across LoC, Greater Kashmir”

Greater Kashmir, August 19, 2014

Zakir Hussain vividly remembers his last visit to Skardu in Baltistan to meet his relatives, displaced after 1965 Indo-Pak war. His eyes lit up the moment he talks about his three month stay in Skardu in 2008. Chief Executive Councilor of the Ladakh Autonomous Hill Development Council (LAHDC) Kargil, stated they have umpteen times taken up with the Government of India the opening of the Kargil-Skardu road. “It is the most peaceful route with no history of any security related incident. But unfortunately there has been no progress as both India and Pakistan are unwilling to take the step,” he stated. Undeterred by the cold response from both the countries, a group of youth in Kargil, joined by their brethren in Baltistan and Gilgit, have launched a joint campaign on the social networking sites like Facebook, Twitter, seeking opening of the road. “We started this campaign to create awareness across India and Pakistan about the sufferings of the divided families and the need for opening this route,” stated Mukthar Zahid. “The movement is growing day-by-day. The aim is to create the pressure on India and Pakistan to take the long awaited Confidence Building Measure.”

“GBLA Passes Local Govt. Act 2014”

Pakistan Observer, August 20, 2014

Gilgit-Baltistan Legislative Assembly (GBLA) has unanimously passed the Local Government Act 2014. The Select Committee was provided technical support in this process by Strengthening Participatory Federalism and Decentralization Project of UNDP-Pakistan and Gilgit-Baltistan Policy Institute. Gilgit-Baltistan has had the Punjab Local Government Ordinance of 1979 enforced in the region since September 1979. A participatory and consultative process had been adopted for drafting the local government bill 2014 similar to the Parliamentary Committee for Constitutional Reforms that drafted the 18th Constitutional Amendment. ### “Talking about devolution: Senate resolution on empowering G-B sparks hopes”

GILGIT: The resolution adopted by the senate on August 19 to amend Gilgit-Baltistan's (G-B) self-governance order to empower the de facto province has given hope to the region's lawmakers and politicians. To shift powers from the G-B Council to its legislative assembly has been a longstanding demand of politicians in the region. The G-B Council is a 12-member body headed by the prime minister. It is equally represented by the G-B and federal governments, unlike the assembly which is populated by elected representatives. The resolution adopted by the Senate on August 19 to amend Gilgit-Baltistan's (G-B) self-governance order to empower the de facto province has given hope to the region's lawmakers and politicians. The senate unanimously adopted a resolution on August 19, moved by Pakistan Peoples Party's (PPP) Farhatullah Babar. It called upon the government to amend the G-B (Empowerment and Self-governance) Order 2009. “If this resolution is acted upon, the G-B assembly could have powers to legislate on issues like minerals, power and forests,” Amjad Hussain, a member of the G-B Council noted.

Shabbir Mir, “Facing a delay: With protest in Islamabad, elections in G-B take a hit”

The Express Tribune, August 31, 2014

Elections in Gilgit-Baltistan — earlier expected to be held by the end of 2014 — have apparently fallen victim to the ongoing protests of Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI) and Pakistan Awami Tehreek (PAT) in the federal capital. The beleaguered federal government has not been able to find enough time to address the issue of elections in G-B, giving rise to speculation of a 'constitutional breakdown' on December 11, when the tenure of the ruling Pakistan Peoples Party comes to an end. “The G-B government will step aside on December 11 after completing its five-year term, and with it G-B will plunge into a constitutional crisis as the Governance Order 2009 has no provision for a caretaker setup,” Pakistan Muslim League-Nawaz's regional chief Hafeezur Rahman stated while talking to a select group of journalists in Gilgit on August 30.

“The federal government was working on an election schedule, but the dharnas have resulted in a delay as the government's attention is on resolving them,” explained Hafeez. G-B has not been immune to the political impasse in Islamabad. Residents and politicians in the region are anxiously awaiting the outcome. “This should come to an end. This isn't going to give us anything,” Murtaza, a resident of Gilgit, hoped for a timely end to the crisis. Pro-government parties led by PML-N also organised a car rally in Gilgit on to express solidarity with the government. “We will not allow anybody to rob peoples' mandate,” Hafeez told participants of the rally.

Maha Mussadaq, “Pakistan K2 Expedition: Mountaineers get cold shoulder from G-B government”

The Express Tribune, August 3, 2014

ISLAMABAD: The K2 climbing anniversary mission may have made international headlines last week when its team of mountaineers conquered the “killer mountain” but they failed to capture the imagination of the country's highest officials. Not a single senior government official from Gilgit-Baltistan is likely to welcome the triumphant mountaineers when they return to Askole. Repeated attempts via phone and email have been made by the organisers to the G-B chief minister and chief secretary's office to invite them to the reception upon the mountaineers' return. However, they have refused to commit at the moment.

“Even after all these efforts, as a native I feel ashamed that people from other countries come here and invest in us while our own government cannot give them some form of recognition,” stated Munir Ahmed, the spokesperson for the Pakistan K2 Expedition project. Six Pakistani mountaineers and four Italians teamed up for an expedition to challenge history after they made it to the summit on August 2. The Pakistani group consisted of Hassan Jan, Ali Durrani, Rahmatullah Baig, Ghulam Mehdi, Rozi Ali and Muhammad Sadiq. Two Italian mountaineers Michele Cucchi and Simone Origone, and documentary-filmmaker and climber Daniele Nardi were accompanying the climbers.

Shabbir Mir, “Patrons of the day: G-B govt, army join to organise festivities”

The Express Tribune, August 14, 2014

GILGIT: The government and army have joined hands in Gilgit-Baltistan (G-B) after a decade to mark August 14 with much fanfare. The festivities formally started on August 13 morning as legislators of the G-B Legislative Assembly paid visits to the families of martyrs and laid floral wreaths on their graves. The decision was taken in the backdrop of Operation Zarb-e-Azb launched by the Pakistan Army in North Waziristan.

“This is a special occasion for us to pay tribute to our brave army fighting a war against militancy,” stated G-B Minister for Information Sadia Danish on August 13. The 'Azadi polo match' took place at about 5pm at Shahi Polo Ground, with the force commander participating as chief guest along with the chief secretary. At about 11pm, the armed forces held a march, followed by fireworks. The events are scheduled to continue well into August 14.

Residents of G-B are not unfamiliar with 14 August celebrations. Until the mid-1990s, the day used to be marked on a massive scale in the region. The army and police would arrange parades to the beat of deafening drums and odes in front of huge crowds. Likewise, all cars, shops and homes would be adorned with Pakistani flags.

The Express Tribune, August 6, 2014

GILGIT: Gilgit-Baltistan (G-B) Chief Minister Mehdi Shah promised fool proof security and a conducive environment for investment if Chinese businessmen turn to G-B. “I invite the business community of China to visit G-B, which has immense potential, and explore avenues for investment,” Mehdi Shah told an official Chinese delegation in Kashgar, China, according to a statement issued from the CM's Secretariat.

Shah, accompanied by several other members of his cabinet, is on an official visit to China to explore business opportunities for G-B. This is Shah's fourth visit to China since he assumed office in 2010. “The Pak-China friendship is exemplary but we need to further expand it,” stated Shah, referring to the proposed railway track that will pass through G-B to connect China with Gwadar. The statement stated Shah also proposed revising the two-day weekend to a one-day weekend for customs and other government offices to further the interest of traders in Pakistan.

In response to Shah's propositions, a delegation of Chinese businessmen will visit G-B this year, it added. While the CM's visit attracted fierce criticism from opposition parties more so after clashes between two groups of Nurbakhshiyas led to dozens injured and arrested in Baltistan the trip was termed a success by Minister for Minerals Muhammad Naseer. “I am pretty sure the visit will prove successful and the people in China will take [the offers] seriously,” Naseer told journalists in Gilgit.

Shabbir Mir, “Scaling new heights: From the mountain of Italians to the mountain of Pakistanis”

The Express Tribune, August 9, 2014

GILGIT: Sixty years ago the world's second highest peak, located in Gilgit-Baltistan, was a “mountain of the Italians”, but K2 is now also “the mountain of Pakistanis,” says famous mountaineer Agostino Da Polenza. He was referring to 'K2, 60 years later', a recent expedition to the 'savage mountain' which marked the 60th anniversary of the first successful ascent.

Italians Achille Compagnoni and Lino Lacedelli became the first men to conquer the mighty K2 in 1954. They were the first to reach the mountain's 28,251-foot-high summit. In an email sent on August 7, Polenza, the president of Ev-K2CNR, a non-profit association which promotes scientific and technological research in mountain areas, wrote: “It is with huge pride that I wish to report that seven members of the 'K2, 60 years later' have climbed the summit.”

Polanza, who conquered the perilous peak in 1983 to join a list of other Italians who had achieved this feat, further wrote, “We are just returning from the expedition to K2 which has been a great success from both scientific and mountaineering point of views.”

August 26, 2014

GILGIT: Tall trees near Gilgit Airport's runway have been a problem in the past and have cropped up again. According to a Civil Aviation Authority (CAA) official, who wished to remain anonymous, the issue first came up in 2010-11 when some trees near Gilgit airport were removed and some trimmed. The owners were paid up to Rs150,000 by the district administration and were asked to not grow the foliage again, but they paid no heed, stated the official.

More recently, Pakistan International Airlines Captain Sajjad Gul lodged a verbal complaint to the G-B chief minister (CM) who was on the flight Gul piloted from Islamabad to Gilgit. Gul told CM Mehdi Shah the trees near the runway were a cause for concern and can hinder the safety of air operations. Passing the baton Shah then directed the Gilgit deputy commissioner (DC) to take up the matter and remove the trees without any delay.

Shabbir Mir, “Slow and steady: 220 turtles return from their Chinese Holiday”

The Express Tribune, August 20, 2014

GILGIT: Over 200 turtles smuggled into China finally found their way back home to Pakistan on August 19, thanks to the collaborative efforts of Chinese authorities as well as the Gilgit-Baltistan (G-B) and Sindh wildlife departments. The consignment was seized in the neighbouring country during the last week of June after authorities received information on “unusual luggage” coming from Pakistan. When intercepted, experts determined the consignment contained 220 hard-shell turtles. Earlier reports had put the number at 180. “The freshwater turtles were smuggled to China from Karachi via G-B,” Chief Conservator Wildlife Javed Ahmed told the media in Gilgit.

The animals had been packed inside boxes, each containing 10 turtles. “They had been collected from Karachi and Sukkur by smugglers, two of whom belong to G-B.” Ahmed, who recently reached Gilgit from China, along with 10 Sindh wildlife officials, successfully negotiated the release of the turtles. The animals are listed in the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species (CITES), thus their exchange is banned.

“Life in the mountains: Skill polishing to revive stonemasonry in G-B”

The Express Tribune, August 30, 2014

GILGIT: Efforts have begun in Gilgit-Baltistan (G-B) to revive the craft of stone-masonry, a trend which has gradually been replaced by the introduction of cemented bricks over the past decades, posing a threat to the environment. A stakeholders meeting was organised in this regard on August 29 under the Pakistan Technical and Vocational Education and Training Reform Support Programme's initiative, Fund for Innovative Trainings (FIT).

Speaking at the meeting, a senior official of the Rupani Foundation, Jalaluddin, stated: “The main reason people abandoned stonemasonry is its cost.” The Rupani Foundation is an organisation which works to create economic opportunities for people living in the mountainous areas of Pakistan, Afghanistan and Tajikistan. Jalal, however, insisted ways have to be found to make building with stone economical so as to create job opportunities and protect the environment. Given the harsh weather conditions in winter across the hilly region of G-B, cement, a poor insulator, does not help houses seal the heat in. The cement brick wall is too thin to keep the cold out, leading to an increased reliance on forest wood for heating, which depletes forest reserves.

“Glacial melting: Data-sharing needed to mitigate disasters”

The Express Tribune, August 16, 2014

NAGAR: Our elders used to say this glacier was very high, so high there was no one living here. This was a giant glacial lake, Sajjad Ali stated. Standing on a cliff, he pointed down at the Hopar Glacier, more than a thousand metres below, its surface covered by massive boulders it had swept out of its way as it carved a valley through the Karakoram Mountains. In the distance rises Mt Spantik, the snow-covered, 7,027 metre-high confluence of five major glaciers, including two of the largest five bodies of ice outside the Polar Regions. One of the tallest peaks of the Karakoram Mountains, Spantik is part of the Upper Indus Basin, the source for most of the rivers in South Asia, making it a vitally important environmental resource for the lives of people across the region.

Down below, lines of vegetation cut across otherwise barren valley walls. Trees and shrubs grow along artificial irrigation canals- some of them centuries old - built by locals to carry water from lakes formed by melting glaciers to their homes. If the glaciers melt too rapidly, those villages are at risk of flooding. “Not just here, but all over Gilgit-Baltistan [region], most [glaciers] are downsizing, retreating in their positions,” stated Ali, a researcher at the Karakoram International University. “It could be due to carbon emissions, or shifting monsoon precipitation, or to a natural cycle, maybe an inter-glacial age, or some combination but it needs to be studied.”
