In this Edition

Over the last few years, the multibillion worth proposed Diamer Bhasha dam project has been a source of huge concern for the establishment in Pakistan. The proposed dam is slated to be built in the Diamer district of Gilgit Baltistan and the power houses for the same will be located in Kohistan district of the neighbouring Khyber Pakhtunkhwa province. Apart from the prevailing dearth of funds (to support the mega hydropower project), the proposed dam is deeply mired in several controversies- important being a land dispute between Gilgit Baltistan and Khyber Pakhtunkhwa. As noted in one of the reports included in the current issue, the dispute revolves around a stretch 10 kilometre land that lies at the border between the two regions and has, at the same time, being demarcated for the proposed Diamer Bhasha dam project.

The land dispute between the two sides has been pending for a long time. The state has intervened on the matter by constituting a boundary commission. However, all such efforts have failed to resolve the deadlock. The Jirga also attempted to solve the issue and urged local people to entrust the state to amicably sort out all the differences regarding land dispute. So far the issue remains unresolved and this casts doubt on the Pakistan government's plan to start construction on the ambitious Diamer Bhasha dam by the middle of this year. No headway has been made on the actual work of construction on this ambitious project despite the fact that ground breaking has been held in past for the same on at least two occasions.

Positive reactions have poured in on Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi's visit to Lahore towards the end of December 2015. The leadership of the so called Azad Jammu and Kashmir, including the President Sardar Yaqoob Khan, welcomed Prime Minister Modi's visit to Pakistan. It was noted that the visible bonhomie during the visit between the prime ministers of India Pakistan would help creating a conducive atmosphere for dialogue and lead towards meaningful constructive engagement between the two sides.

“AJK like setup to be introduced in GB”

Online International News, December 1, 2015

Gilgit Baltistan (GB) Chief Minister Hafiz ur Rehman submitted a consensus based proposal on December 4 in a committee headed by Sirtaj Aziz to introduce Azad Jammu and Kashmir (AJK) like setup in GB. Earlier, a Committee was formed under the chairmanship of Advisor to Prime Minister Muhammad Nawaz Sharif Sartaj Aziz to give a constitutional status to GB. The proposal will be presented in the said committee. All political and religious parties of GB will be attending committee session and are on one page. It is decided that GB will be given the same status as that of AJK without bringing constitutional amendment because it will affect AJK's status. GB will have its own judiciary setup, health, educational department and Auditor General. Designation of Governor will be changed to President, Chief Minister to Prime Minister, etc. Most importantly, GB will get rights and protections under the Constitution of Pakistan.

“Khunjerab Pass closed for 4 months”

The Nation, December 1, 2015

The Khunjerab pass in Gilgit-Baltistan (G-B) International Border of Pak-China has been closed on November 30 for all types of traffic for a period of four months. The official source of immigration noted that the route will remain closed due to heavy snow fall at Khunjerab Pass during the winters, under an agreement between the government of Pakistan and China signed in 1985 by both countries. Hundreds of containers are reportedly left in China because of the closure. According to a source that the volume of trade between Pakistan and China was higher after PM inaugurated the Attabad tunnel than the past five years. This was low after the blockage of KKH at Attabad. During the winter season tens of feet of snow fall on the Khunjerab pass, located between Lon 76.515° & Lat 35.904°. The pass connects China and Pakistan at an altitude of around 15, 000 feet above the sea level.

Shabbir Mir, “Warring families of Gilgit settle differences”

The Express Tribune, December 2, 2015

In a region plagued by sectarian strife, a rare show of harmony raised hopes for many as warring families who lost 13 relatives to acts of violence in 2012 pardoned each other in Gilgit. On April 3, 2012, clashes erupted between Shias and Sunnis after masked motorcyclists attacked a rally held by the G-B chapter of Ahle Sunnat Wal Jamaat (ASWJ) in Garhi Bagh, Gilgit to protest the detention of one of its leaders. The man behind the reconciliation was G-B Assembly Speaker Jafarullah Khan who brought together the relatives of the men killed on that day. Over 55 others were injured in the violence that was sparked off by the grenade attack. When news of the incident reached Chilas Town, a vengeful mob ran amok, burning passenger buses and firing at people of rival sects. At least 10 passengers were killed. Following the violence, authorities imposed a curfew in Gilgit town and registered cases under the Anti-Terrorism Act against 15 men for attacking buses in Chilas. Three were also booked for throwing a hand grenade at the rally.

Shabbir Mir, “Insulating Diامر from trouble”

The Express Tribune, December 4, 2015

For quite some time now, Gilgit-Baltistan's scenic Diامر Valley has been in the spotlight, but for all the wrong reasons. It all began in 2011-12, when passenger buses travelling on the Karakoram Highway were attacked and their passengers butchered on sectarian grounds. A year later, armed men wearing army uniforms, stormed a base camp in Nanga Parbat, killing 10 foreign mountaineers. It does not end there. The security officials investigating the high-profile murders of the mountaineers also fell prey to terrorists in the days that followed the attack. After a brief pause, the district made headlines again in 2015. First, for barring women from voting and then blaming a djinn for the abduction and subsequent murder of a four-year-old child. In addition to this, there was also an incident in November 2015 where two officials were kidnapped, although this failed to draw media attention. With a population of over 0.2 million, Diامر is one of the 10 districts in Gilgit-Baltistan, sharing boundaries with Kohistan in Khyber- Pakhtunkhwa. Just like its neighbour, Diامر's society is deeply patriarchal and heavily influenced by orthodox clergy. Class stratification runs deep, as Sheen and Yashkun tribes wield political, social and economic clout. While it comprises 77 per cent of the total forest-cover in Gilgit-Baltistan, the valley is lagging far behind on many other fronts. According to Alif Ailaan Pakistan District Education Rankings 2015, Diامر is ranked 95 out of 148 districts in terms of education and 127 in terms of infrastructure and facilities.

“Lawmaker Rehana Abbadi demands security from G-B govt”

The Express Tribune, December 4, 2015

The long-standing row between Gilgit-Baltistan and Kohistan over a strip of land on both sides of Basri check post (which separates the two regions) has resurfaced. The nearly 10-kilometre stretch of land is among the areas being demarcated for acquisition for the Diامر-Bhasha Dam project. An official privy to the development noted that the issue flared up once again when work on the realignment of Karakoram Highway (KKH) near Shatial, 60 kilometres west of Chilas, was temporarily screeched to a halt by residents. “On December 3 locals threatened to permanently stop work on the disputed territory if the matter is not resolved as per their wishes,” the official stated. “More clashes and bloodshed will take place on both sides of the check post if the issue is not settled.” The disputed land, which separates Kohistan from the region, has been a bone of contention between Thor Valley, Diamer in Gilgit-Baltistan and Harban Nala, Kohistan in Khyber-Pakhtunkhwa. The status of the land remains uncertain and has been the cause of considerable unrest in Diamer and Kohistan as it involves compensation and royalty in the long run. In January 2014, the federal government stepped in to resolve the issue. The matter was referred to a boundary commission, constituted by the Supreme Court of Pakistan, for a permanent settlement. Rangers were stationed on the disputed territory to defuse tension till a decision was reached. A jirga brokered a 40-day ceasefire between warring tribes in Kohistan and G-B. It convinced the warring tribespeople to bid farewell to arms and leave the boundary dispute for the government to resolve. However, in February 2014, locals on the G-B side took to the streets and blocked KKH after residents of Kohistan forcibly took away over 400 goats from a resident of Diamer. The goats had been grazing on a swath of land claimed by both regions.

Shabbir Mir, “Separate constitutional status: G-B lawyers to garner support from counterparts in AJK”

The Express Tribune, December 6, 2015

Lawyers in Gilgit-Baltistan plan to seek the support of their counterparts in Azad Jammu and Kashmir (AJK) for a separate constitutional status for the region. Lawyers and politicians in AJK have vehemently opposed a separate constitutional status for G-B. They believe the move can weaken support for the Kashmir issue. On November 16, AJK former prime minister Sardar Attiq Ahmad Khan stated making G-B the fifth province of Pakistan will dent the Kashmir cause. G-B Bar Council Vice Chairman Shehbaz Khan stated a delegation will be sent to AJK to rally support for G-B's cause. "We will request AJK lawyers not to raise objection if G-B is accorded a separate constitutional status," stated Shehbaz. The decision comes a day after the bar council's annual general meeting in Gilgit. In addition, lawyers also plan to organise a convention in December 2015 in Islamabad. A large number of lawyers from AJK and G-B will participate in the convention.

"Pakistan under stress to initiate political reforms in Gilgit Baltistan"

New Delhi Times, December 5, 2015

Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif declared on 24th November political reforms in Gilgit-Baltistan (GB) to redress the grievances of the people of the region. While speaking at the swearing-in ceremony of Mir Ghazanfar Ali Khan-the new Governor of Gilgit Baltistan at Gilgit, Nawaz informed that a committee has been set up for the purpose with Chief Minister Hafeezur Rehman, as a member to work out a plan for empowering people to resolve their issues. He promised to set up more economic zones worth multi-billion dollar projects as a back up to China-Pakistan Economic Corridor and hoped that all these would increase trade activities in the region making it a business hub. While expressing the hope that development of tourism industry would usher in an era of progress in the region Nawaz informed about the progress of work on various power projects, including Bhasha Dam, Bunji and Dasu dams. Chief Minister Hafizur Rehman reiterated government's determination to develop the region. Governor Mir Ghazanfar Ali promised to accord priority to development-oriented projects and appealed to the federal government for financial help for completing the Gilgit-Skardu road project. Nawaz obliged declaring 50 crores for the Road. The development comes in the backdrop of agitation in the region clamouring for development, especially Modi's model of development in Jammu Kashmir region and appears to be Pakistan government's knee-jerk reaction not to appear inferior as compared to India in developmental resolve. More such posers are expected in coming months.

"Rescue 1122 service to be introduced in all AJK districts"

"Peace-loving GB people reject terrorism: Pervaiz"

Samma TV, December 6, 2015

Federal Information Minister Pervaiz Rashid stated on December 6 that the peace-loving people of Gilgit-Baltistan had rejected terrorism in its all forms and manifestations and made the region a cradle of peace. Speaking as the chief guest at a seminar on "Realizing the potential of Gilgit-Baltistan to commemorate the independence day of GB-Nov 1, 1947?", the minister noted killing innocent people was the creed of Satan. Sometime ago some followers of evil forces had slit the throats of innocent people after disembarking them from busses and identifying them by their identity cards, he regretted. Pervaiz Rashid further stated Prime Minister Muhammad Nawaz Sharif had constituted a committee under the chairmanship of his Adviser Sartaj Aziz on the constitutional rights for GB. The people would not only get constitutional rights but also the right of economic progress during the Pakistan Muslim League-Nawaz (PML-N) rule, he added. He stated like constitutional rights, road links were also vital. Roads not only linked regions but also brought people closer, besides ushering in economic prosperity, job opportunities and increase in trade, along with promoting culture and heritage.

“No terror incident in GB after 2013 elections: chief minister”

Business Recorder, December 7, 2015

Gilgit-Baltistan Chief Minister Hafiz Hafeezur Rehman on December 6 stated the PML-N government through its effective and prudent policies has been able to ensure the overall peace and unity in Gilgit-Baltistan region. He noted not a single incident of terrorism has occurred in the region since its coming to power after 2013 general elections. Addressing a seminar he stated, "that GB had cultural, linguistic, religious diversity and we can change it into an opportunity through unity." He noted after the implementation of National Action Plan, Gilgit-Baltistan has become far more peaceful though in the past sectarian divides were created by certain elements.

He further stated that with the construction of Karakoram Highway, people of GB came out this far-off and cut-off region and now after completion of China-Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC), the region would progress by leaps and bounds in the years ahead. He stated that the present government of GB was striving day and night to change the destiny of the people of the GB region. Citing the example of surge in tourist activity, he noted that this year over 600,000 tourists have visited GB while during past 12 years only 70,000 tourists came to GB. ### “Uncertain Status of FATA and GB”

The Nation, December 8, 2015

Not all Pakistani citizens are completely Pakistani citizens. While this was true for several minorities, such as the Ahmedis, whose rights contrast with the majority Sunni population, it is also true for large swathes of territory too. Places like Gilgit-Baltistan (GB), Azad Jammu and Kashmir (AJK) and Federally Administered Tribal Areas (FATA) still do not enjoy the same constitutional protections that other Pakistani citizens do. They are administrative anomalies; a ramshackle and makeshift jumble of old colonial law, customary law, and incomplete legislative acts which leaves their residents uncertain and unprotected. Although the Pakistan Muslim League-Nawaz (PML-N) has recently shifted its focus towards restructuring these faults, its promise of reform like so many governments before may yet be just another cosmetic change. Addressing a rally in connection to Independence Day in GB, Information Minister Senator Pervaiz Rashid stated the people of the province would get their “constitutional rights”, and will prosper due to the China-Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC). At the same time, the debate over the fate of FATA is also underway; the government is pushing for a merger with the province of Khyber Pakhtunkhwa, a section of tribal leaders and political representatives want FATA to be declared an autonomous province, while some moot a hybrid system a provincially administered tribal area (PATA). Both regions, though different in history and administrative setup, are essentially arguing for the same thing equal rights and powers as other provinces and success of one campaign is bound to increase the pressure of the other.

“Vacant seat: G-B gears up for GBLA-6 polls”

The Election Commission in Gilgit-Baltistan

announced the by-polls schedule for a constituency vacated by Mir Ghazanfar Ali GBLA-6, Hunza-Nagar 3. The seat fell vacant after Ghazanfar took charge as the region's governor. The public notice for by-polls will be issued by December 10, while the dates for filing nomination papers are December 14 and 15. ### “Kashmiri leaders hail Pak-India talks”

The Express Tribune, December 11, 2015

Leaders in Azad Jammu and Kashmir (AJK) hailed the resumption of dialogue between Pakistan and India. AJK Minister for Rehabilitation Abdul Majid Khan noted at a seminar on human rights in Muzaffarabad on December 10 that the decision to hold dialogue, announced after bilateral talks in Islamabad on December 9, had been hailed in the city and in Srinagar. “Kashmiris are the main party to the dispute, and without including Kashmiri leadership the talks will not succeed.”

“Legislative assembly elections: JKPP to push for direct elections for president”

The Express Tribune, December 13, 2015

The Azad Kashmir president should be elected through a direct public vote, newly-elected Jammu Kashmir Peoples' Party (JKPP) President Sardar Khalid Ibrahim Khan suggested on December 12. While addressing a press conference at National Press Club, the party president stated, “We do not support the idea of completely scrapping of 1974 Interim Act, but there is a dire need to revisit it in order to restore the sanctity of the act and dignity of the presidency”. All the major political parties will be contesting elections for the legislative assembly in AJK, likely to be held in May or June 2016. Khan stated major constitutional changes came in General Yahya Khan's era, when adult franchise was adopted and a democratic setup was introduced in Azad Jammu and Kashmir. In 1974, parliamentary system was introduced in AJK under the Interim Constitution Act, which has undergone a number of amendments. Since 1975, the prime minister has been elected by members of the legislative assembly and is the chief executive of the state, whereas the president is the constitutional head.

He noted the system in his party was comparatively better than many others because it holds biannual intraparty elections. “The 1974 act damaged the sanctity of the presidency. The post is literally auctioned in AJK,” he stated.

Shahzad Anwar, “Eight months on: AJK without poll body chief”

The Express Tribune, December 15, 2015

Azad Jammu and Kashmir (AJK) have been without a chief election commissioner (CEC) ever since the last one retired on April 14, 2015, because the federal and the state governments cannot agree on a new name. The PPP-led AJK government sent three names of serving AJK Supreme Court judges -Justice Mustafa Mughal, Justice Rasheed Sularia and Justice Sardar Abdul Hameed- to the Kashmir Council on September 11. The council, a federally-controlled body headed by the prime minister, ignored all three and sent back an advice to appoint Justice (ret'd) Munir Ahmed Chaudhry, the CEC. It may be recalled that Justice Chaudhry, then AJK High Court judge, was given the additional charge of CEC on April 27, 2013. He held the post till his retirement on April 14, 2015. AJK President Sardar Yaqoob Khan filed a reference with the AJK apex court over the CEC appointment controversy on September 17. A full bench- headed by Chief Justice Mustafa Mughal and comprising Justice Muhammad Azam Khan, Justice Chaudhry Mohammad Ibrahim Zia, Justice Raja Saeed Akram Khan and Justice Masood Ahmed Sheikh- ruled that the council could only pick one of the three names the legislative assembly would forward to it. And that the council can ask the assembly to send another three names if it does not pick anyone from the first list. The court had also maintained that a serving judge of the high court could be appointed as CEC, but if a high court judge ceases to function as CEC for any reason, he could not be reappointed for the remaining period.

Prateek Joshi, "India's Karakoram Conundrum: The Great Game Lives On"

Geopolitical Monitor, December 15, 2015

The Karakoram Range lies on the northernmost borders of Pakistan and India, further extending into the western border of China. The range houses a huge concentration of peaks over 8,000 meters in height, including K2, the world's second-highest peak. It consists of the Ladakh region of India, the Gilgit-Baltistan region of Pakistan Occupied Kashmir, and it touches the Aksai Chin region occupied by China. The Great Game ended long ago, but the era of suspicion, border disputes, and geopolitical calculations it propagated got carried into the post-colonial states of India, China, and Pakistan. These machinations of the Great Game got reproduced on the smaller canvas of the Karakoram mountain ranges. The obsession with borders and strategic mountain passes still characterizes the Karakoram region. India as a mutual enemy strengthened Chinese and Pakistani relations through the Karakoram highway and an unconditional border agreement. On the other hand, the Indian side Karakoram's borders of Ladakh with Baltistan and Aksai Chin are heavily militarized. The Karakorams have a glorious past as a Silk Route road connecting India to the markets of Central Asia. The region is also characterized by the rich cultural intermingling of Kashmiri, Turkic, and Buddhist culture through the trading caravans. Once India's historical gateway to Central Asia and China, in the modern era it has become a lingering geopolitical flashpoint between India, China and Pakistan.

"Gilgit Baltistan: Government Apathy for Earthquake Victims is Worrisome"

UNPO, December 16, 2015

People of Gilgit Baltistan have been badly hit by the harsh winters. With no government help, especially after the October 26 earthquake, the residents brace up for the extreme weather conditions. A children's group, sitting in the open over the snow, is enjoying eating snacks. It is for the first time an NGO-Alamgir Welfare Trust International has reached the far-flung district of Ghizer in Gilgit Baltistan after the October 26 earthquake, distributing food packs and blankets. However, the woes of the locals will not end with this little relief measure the food packets will not last long and blankets will not help them to face the chill in the harsh climatic conditions that have engulfed the region. Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif had, after the earthquake, announced a relief package for Gilgit-Baltistan- Rs 0.2 million for completely damaged houses, while Rs 0.1 million for the partially damaged. Till now, the locals have received 2 Kgs of rice, 2 Kgs of pulses and 1 Kg wheat a slap on their face. While the people living in the mountainous regions do not have any option to get their voice heard, the students studying in urban localities have been on protest, demanding compensation for the losses people suffered.

I.A. Rehman, “A new round on Kashmir”

The News, December 20, 2015

The way to India-Pakistan negotiations has been cleared once again as if by a sudden wave of the magic wand. Any speculation about the hands that have secured satisfaction of the egos of the subcontinental neighbours is unnecessary for they can easily be recognised. For the moment, India is happy that it has succeeded in putting terrorism high on the agenda of “comprehensive” negotiations although the subject was always included in the “composite” dialogue. And when Sushma Swaraj pitches for 'uninterrupted' parleys nobody should be happier than Mani Shankar Ayer because something of his terminology has survived. Pakistan is, of course, happy that Kashmir is back on the agenda for bilateral talks. Unfortunately, the government of Pakistan has not taken its people fully into confidence about the change in its Kashmir policy. While the parasitical militants are still ranting about taking Kashmir by force, that option was finally given up years ago by none else than General Pervez Musharraf, the then president of Pakistan and chief of the army staff and the man behind the ill-planned and ill-fated Kargil adventure. And if Nawaz Sharif agreed with Asif Zardari on any point it was their shared rejection of the idea of going to war with India over Kashmir. Equally clear is the fact Pakistan itself dealt a fatal blow to the UN efforts to intervene meaningfully in Kashmir by its illogical reliance on the military option. The world still wants an end to the Kashmir stalemate as a condition necessary for peace and stability in South Asia but the terms of settlement devised in the 1950s are no longer relevant. Further, it is time that all notions of pressurizing India through pin pricks by non-state actors were given up because the international community, in its present mood, would not have anything of that kind.

Shahbaz Rana, “ECNEC says yes to Neelum-Jhelum, CPEC road projects”

The Express Tribune, December 20, 2015

The government gave its final go-ahead to four mega projects, including two road construction schemes under the China-Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC) at a revised cost of Rs862 billion Rs214 billion or one-third higher than original estimates.

The Executive Committee of National Economic Council (Ecneec) approved the 969-megawatt Neelum Jhelum Hydropower project as well as CPEC's 118-kilometre long Havelian-Thakot and 392-km Sukkur-Multan section roads. It also approved the National Highway N-70 East-West Road Improvement Project. The main reason behind the increase in cost of these projects except Neelum Jhelum was the government's compulsion to take foreign loans, which were tied with giving engineering, procurement and construction contracts, to parties belonging to these countries. The contractors placed bids higher than the original ones, leaving no option for the government but to revise the cost.

“Diamer-Bhasha Dam: Construction to begin next year”

The Express Tribune, December 29, 2015

Construction work on the Diamer-Bhasha Dam would start in 2016, stated officials in the Ministry of Planning, Development and Reform. Land acquisition process for the project has been finalised with a cost of Rs104 billion. The project, likely to be part of the second phase of the China-Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC), would not only generate 4,500 megawatts of electricity but would also serve as a huge water reservoir for the country. “After a decade, the country is expected to face acute shortage of water, in order to prevent food starvation, this project will be developed at any cost,” Planning, Development and Reform Minister Ahsan Iqbal noted. He stated the government accorded highest priority to the Dam because a serious water crisis was feared in the next five to ten years, much bigger than the electricity crisis. Diamer-Bhasha Dam would produce environmentally clean hydroelectric power, store an extra 8.5 million acre feet of water that would be used for irrigation and drinking, extend the life of Tarbela Dam located downstream by 35 years and control flood damage downstream Indus River during high floods.

Contractors in Gilgit-Baltistan announced a strike after the federal government withdrew rebate on income and other tax in the region.
