FIGHT TERROR FINANCING WITHOUT AMBIGUITY: PM

REPRESENTATIVES FROM MORE THAN 70 COUNTRIES ATTENDED EVENT

India hosted the third edition of the No Money for Terror Financing Conference in New Delhi from 18 to 19 November 2022. Representatives from more than 70 countries attended the event, which spanned four thematic sessions – international cooperation to address challenges in combatting terrorist financing; global trends in terrorism and terrorist financing; use of formal and informal channels for terrorism; and emerging technologies and terrorist financing.

During his inaugural address, Prime Minister Narendra Modi warned against any ambiguity in related discussions, emphasised how the poor and local economies are worst affected by terrorism. In such an instance, adopting a “larger, proactive, and systemic response” is vital to eliminate this scourge. In addition, the Prime Minister implicitly called out Pakistan for its policy of state-sponsored terrorism, requested the international leaders to be more aware of proxy conflicts, and highlighted the link between organised crime and terrorism.

Throwing light on the difference between fighting a terrorist and fighting terrorism, the Prime Minister said that a terrorist might be neutralised with weapons, but such tactical gains will soon be lost without a larger strategy to hurt their finances. Shri Modi said, “A terrorist is an individual, but terrorism is about a network of individuals.” – PMINDIA, PIB, The Hindu

INDIA MOOTS PERMANENT SECRETARIAT TO COMBAT TERRORISM FUNDING

MINISTER OF HOME AFFAIRS
AMIT SHAH

Delivering the Chair’s address at the conclusion of the ‘No Money for Terror’ (NMFT) conference, the Indian Minister of Home Affairs, Mr. Amit Shah, proposed the establishment of a permanent secretariat to sustain the continued global focus on counter-terrorism financing. In addition, he said that “India will circulate a discussion paper to all participating jurisdictions for their valuable comments (in this regard).”

Mr. Shah also stressed India’s position that all countries agree to one standard definition of ‘terrorism’ and ‘terror financing’ and added, “it should not become a political issue.” He said the Government of India has also decided to develop national and global databases on terrorism, narcotics, and economic offences. – The Hindu

END OF ISIS’ THIRD AND THE MOST MYSTERIOUS ‘CALIPH’

ABU HASAN AL-HASHMI AL-
QURASHI

Little is known about Hasan Al Hashmi Al-Qurashi, the third slain terrorist leader of ISIS, who was an Iraqi terrorist and the Islamic State’s third “caliph.”

With a shadowy past, Abu Hasan al-Hashmi al-Qurashi was made ‘caliph’ by ISIS on March 10, 2022, a month after former ISIS leader Abu Ibrahim al-Hashimi al-Qurashi blew himself up by detonating his suicide vest to avert capture by US soldiers in Idlib province of Northern Syria.

For his part, Abu Ibrahim was named the ISIS leader after the death of his predecessor Abu Bakr al-Baghdadi. The founder of ISIS and first caliph, Baghdadi, died during a US raid in Idlib province in October 2019. Qurashi refers to a tribe of the Prophet Mohammed, from whom ISIS leaders must claim descent. –

On Wednesday, 30 November 2022, the Islamic State of Iraq and Syria (ISIS) admitted that its top leader Abu Hasan-al-Hashmi al-Qurashi had been killed in a clash. In an audio message on Telegram, a spokesperson of the terrorist organisation Abu Omar al-Muhajir said Hashmi was killed “in combat with enemies of Allah.” However, the audio did not reveal the date and circumstances of Hashmi’s death. According to the ISIS spokesperson, Abu-al-Husseini-al-Qurashi has been selected as the new leader of the terrorist outfit.

The ISIS leader is believed to have died in Daraa province, which is mostly controlled by Syrian government forces and rebels who have reached understanding with the regime. In mid-October, Damascus said it had launched a joint operation against ISIS with former rebels south of the province. However, the United States military’s CENTCOM said the Free Syrian Army killed Abu Hasan al-Hashimi al-Qurashi. “This operation was conducted by The Free Syrian Army in Dar’a province in Syria. ISIS remains a threat to the region. CENTCOM and our partners remain focused on the enduring defeat of ISIS,” CENTCOM spokesman Colonel Joe Buccino said in a statement.

The deaths of successive leaders mark a blow to the armed group, which a US-led coalition said it had defeated in Iraq in 2017 and in Syria two years later. However, sleeper cells of the armed group still carry out attacks in both countries. The Hindustan Times, Outlook India

COLORADO 'HATE' SHOOTING CLAIMS 5 LIVES, INJURES 13

On 19 November 2022, 22-year-old Anderson Lee Aldrich attacked Club Q, an LGBTQ club in Colorado, using an AR-15-style semiautomatic weapon. The mass shooting killed five people – Raymond Green Vance (22); Ashley Paugh (35); Daniel Aston (28); Kelly Loving (40); and Derrick Rump (38). Thirteen others were wounded and had to be hospitalised for treatment. Aldrich was apprehended by authorities after two patrons used physical force to disarm and subdue him.

The perpetrator, currently hospitalised, faces five charges of committing a hate crime and five murder charges. Additional charges might be levied once he is released and the case gets underway. At the moment, these informal charges are contingent on prosecutors proving that the shooting was motivated by Aldrich's bias against the victims' gender or sexual identities. The deadly incident occurred a day before the Transgender Day of Remembrance on 20 November 2022. Observers have drawn parallels with another shooting at an LGBTQ club in Orlando, where the perpetrator killed at least 49 individuals while injuring 53 others.

Colorado's Governor Jared Polis announced for flags at public buildings to be lowered for five days to remember those who lost their lives in the 'senseless tragedy' and for the pride flag to be flown from the State Capitol. In light of the recent events, Club Q's website announced that it will remain closed 'until further notice.' – AP News, CNN
